LONDON, May 10 .- Joe Beckett, heavyweight champion of England, to-night in the presence of a notable assemblage that gathered in beautiful Olympia retained his title by knocking out Bombardier Wells in the third round of a contest in which the victor was always the master of his opponent.

decisive blow was a terrific left to the law that dazed Wells and sent him recling. The champion was upon s man like a panther, and with a trio of short right and left hooks to the jaw sent the Bombardier staggering against the ropes. Wells tottered unsteadily and crashed to the floor, his head striking the canvas with great force and rendering him unconscious. was evident that no count was needed and the defeated man was hauled to his corner by his seconds and revived after much treatment from 99. Hard Blows Tell on Wells.

Wells had a trifle the better of the bexing in the first round, but his flows had no effect on the burly Beckett, who shook off Wells and began to send in terrific thumps to body and face. But in the second Beckett landed a hard forced the pace and with a left uppercut 233 to the jaw floored Wells for a count of nine. Wells was very weak at the gong.

The Bombardier was cautious when he came out for the third round and tried to hold off Beckett with left jabs. Beckett was not to be held off, and with a relentless rush showered the Bombardier with an assortment of blows which put him in condition for the finishing touches. As the defeated man was carried to his corner the 15,000 in the hall crose and cheered the victor. It was announced on behalf of Beckett that he would at once challenge Carpentier for a return batle for the heavyweight championship of Europe.

The crowd that witnessed the battle arpentier defeat Bekett in fifty seconds t Holborn Stadium, December 4, 1919, and the opinion was generally expressed that Beckett would have a good chance to reverse the result of his first fight with the Frenchman, as the Briton is now in better form than ever before. A Miniature Treat Stream on Breadway.

A dozen alick, lively front in a shaded pool below a little waterfall is the tantalizing spectacie that has held many a disciple of Izaak Walton in a trance before one of the large windows of the United States Rubber Com, any in New York recently. Broadway is blase regarding meet things, but the little forest glen with its broadlet and hungry spechled beauties has brought a thrill that thousands have acknowledged.

A few days ago the following letter was received by the company: "I wish you would please remove those trout from the wildow. Every time I go anywhere near your building I spend at least five minutes with my tongue hanging out looking at them. As this happens aix days a week I waste thirty minutes of my bosses' time gazing at those darned trout." The window was arranged by G. A. Smith, who says, for the benefit of the fraternity, he knews several little spots exactly like the one he has depicted.

More Striped Bass in Hudson hiver.

Two catches of large striped bass this week in the Hudson, near Scarborough and Croton, has given added interest to this sport and the corps of local anglers has been supplemented by city sportsmen, who are stad of the opportunity of a day's fishing cicse to New York. William G. Wood of Scarborough, while fishing from the shore near the well known Bishop's Rocks a the Hudson, beached a striped bass measuring 30 inches and weighing 5% pounds. The huss was landed after a battle of 48 minutes. J. Herbert Carpenter of Casining also secured a bass while fishing near Groton Folat, which weighed 5% pounds, according to the official weigher of the Point Senasqua Red and Reel Club.

Good Fishing in westerests that Westchesier county has long enjoyed the reputation of being a fisherman's paradise to those who know the haunts of front, pickerel and bass. Trout are reported nentiful in the Croton River. Daubency Prandreth of Ossiming is getting large messes, the largest fish weighing 1% nound. The pickerel season opened on May I and it is
